Proposed Amendment — 212(14)(c)(ii)

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 24, 1998: Non-residents' certificates of exemption

(48) That a certificate of exemption not be issued pursuant to subparagraph 212(14)(c)(ii) of the Act after February 23, 1998 to a non-resident corporation or trust unless it has as its principal activity the administration of, or the provision of benefits under, one or more superannuation, pension or retirement funds or plans or any funds or plans established to provide employee benefits.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 24, 1998: Non-residents' certificates of exemption

Interest income paid to non-residents from Canadian sources is normally subject to withholding tax under Part XIII of the Income Tax Act. This tax is, however, often modified by Canada's tax treaties and by exceptions within Part XIII itself. Under one of the exceptions, Canada provides an opportunity for certain foreign pension funds to apply for an exemption from the tax which would otherwise be payable. Provided that they meet certain eligibility restrictions, such as being tax exempt in their own country, the Minister of National Revenue may grant them a certificate of exemption for interest payments they receive from arm's-length persons in Canada.

The budget proposes changes to the eligibility criteria for certificates of exemption to provide more certainty in their application. While the continuation of this exemption is justified for active foreign pension funds, the current wording of the Act requires only that the fund have been established or incorporated for the purpose of providing benefits under a pension or superannuation fund. There is currently no obligation that the fund continue to be principally engaged in providing benefits under such funds.

The budget proposes that, to be eligible for a certificate of exemption, a foreign pension fund demonstrate not only that it was established or incorporated to provide benefits under pension, retirement or superannuation funds but also that it continues to do so as its principal activity. This requirement will apply to all certificates of exemption issued after February 23, 1998.

(iii) a trust, corporation or other organization constituted and operated exclusively for charitable purposes, no part of the income of which is payable to, or is otherwise available for, the personal benefit of any proprietor, member, shareholder, trustee or settlor thereof.

Proposed Amendment — Extension of 212.1

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 24, 1998: Surplus stripping

[See also resolution (44)(c) reproduced under 128.1(1)(b) — ed.]

(45) That, with respect to dispositions after February 23, 1998,

(a) subject to subparagraph (b), section 212.1 of the Act apply with respect to the disposition of a share of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada by

(i) a non-resident person,

(ii) a non-resident-owned investment corporation, or

(iii) a partnership of which a non-resident person or non-resident-owned investment corporation is a majority interest partner, to a corporation resident in Canada, and

(b) section 212.1 not apply in respect of the disposition at any time of a share of a corporation resident in Canada that is taxable Canadian property and that is not a property any profit or gain of the taxpayer from the disposition of which at that time could, under an agreement between Canada and another country, be exempt from tax under Part I of the Act.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 24, 1998: Surplus stripping

Section 212.1 of the Income Tax Act is an anti-avoidance rule designed to prevent a non-resident shareholder of a Canadian corporation from withdrawing taxable surplus from the corporation in the form of tax-free proceeds of disposition on the sale of the corporation's shares to another Canadian corporation with which the non-resident does not deal at arm's length.

The budget proposes three changes, applying to dispositions after February 23, 1998, to ensure that this anti-avoidance rule fulfils its original purpose.

First, the rule currently applies only to dispositions of shares of Canadian corporations to Canadian corporations; it will be extended to apply to transfers of shares of any corporation resident in Canada to any other corporation resident in Canada. This change reflects the fact that the concern with the potential avoidance of tax under Part XIII of the Act exists equally with respect to all resident corporations, whether or not they are Canadian corporations.

Second, the rule will be amended to apply explicitly to partnerships of which a non-resident person (or non-resident-owned investment corporation) is a majority interest partner.

Finally, the rule will not apply where the transferred shares are taxable Canadian property on which Canada's right to tax gains is not limited by tax treaty. Where Canada retains the right to tax the transaction as a share disposition generating proceeds of disposition, no tax avoidance exists and thus the recharacterization of the proceeds as taxable surplus may be viewed as unnecessary and inappropriate.

referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) deal at arm's length and, immediately after the disposition, the subject corporation is connected (within the meaning of subsection 186(4), on the assumption that the references therein to "payer corporation" and to "particular corporation" were read as "subject corporation" and "purchaser corporation" respectively), with the purchaser corporation,

(a) the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of any consideration (other than any share of the capital stock of the purchaser corporation) received by the non-resident person from the purchaser corporation for the subject shares, exceeds the paid-up capital in respect of the subject shares immediately before the disposition shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be a dividend paid at the time of the disposition by the purchaser corporation to the non-resident person; and

All that portion of subsec. 212.1(1) preceding para. (a) substituted by 1984, c. 45, s. 87, to add "(otherwise than by virtue of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b))" applicable with respect to dispositions occurring after April 10, 1978.

All that portion of subsec. 212.1(1) preceding para. (a) substituted by 1977-78, c. 32, subsec. 49(1), applicable in respect of dispositions after April 10, 1978. That portion formerly read:

Possible Future Amendment — Requirement for non-resident to post security

Letter from Department of Finance, June 17, 1996: June 17, 1996

Mr. Donald H. Watkins, Chair, Taxation Section, The Canadian Bar Association

Mr. Robert Spindler, C.A., Chair, Taxation Committee, Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants

Dear Messrs. Watkins and Spindler:

At our recent meeting we discussed the possibility of revising the Canadian income tax rules governing the taxation of rental income earned by non-resident owners of Canadian real estate. This letter outlines a proposal that would, if implemented, place the risk of a non-resident's non-compliance with the Canadian tax system on the non-resident rather than the non-resident's Canadian property agent.

In general, Part XIII of the Income Tax Act levies a withholding tax of 25% on rental payments made by Canadians to non-resident owners of Canadian real property. Where the non-resident collects the rent through a Canadian agent (who is typically a building or property manager), the agent is responsible for ensuring that 25% of the gross rental payments are remitted to Revenue Canada. An exception to this general rule exists where a non-resident elects, under section 216 of the Act, to file a Canadian income tax return in respect of the rental income and pay tax on the net property income.

To make the election the non-resident and the non-resident's Canadian agent are required to provide an undertaking to Revenue Canada to file an income tax return for the rental income within six months of the end of the relevant year. Where an election is made, the rule requiring the Canadian agent to remit 25% of the gross rental payments to Revenue Canada does not apply; instead, only 25% of the net amount of rent received by the agent need be remitted. However, if the non-resident fails to either file an income tax return or pay his tax liability within the time required under the election, the Canadian agent becomes liable for the amount that the agent would ordinarily have been required to withhold under Part XIII of the Act (ie., 25% of the gross rental payments) less the amount of tax actually remitted. The non-resident's tax liability is placed on the Canadian agent in an attempt to protect the government from the loss of any tax revenue arising from the non-resident's failure to pay the required tax. This mechanism is necessary because, in practice, it would be very difficult to enforce a tax liability on non-resident property owners.

We are considering alternatives to the current system which may reduce the liability of Canadian agents while at the same time protecting Canada's tax base. To achieve these objectives, we are prepared to consider a system which would require non-resident property owners to post security with Revenue Canada in order to take advantage of the election to file an income tax return and avoid having tax withheld on the gross amount of the rental payments. Where the non-resident fails to pay the required amount of tax within the specified time, the government would be able to look to the security; accordingly, the Canadian agent's exposure to tax could be reduced. In this context, acceptable security could be similar to that which is required under section 116 of the Act.

Finance is not, however, committed to this proposal; it remains our view that the current system works reasonably well from the government's viewpoint, and implementation of the alternative proposal would be considered only if it were thought to provide a better system from the taxpayer's perspective. This alternative has been outlined to a number of real estate organizations and other interested parties from whom we hope to gather comments over the course of the coming months.

I would also note that at our recent meeting you raised the possibility of considering changes to the existing time limits for filing a Part I income tax return under subsection 216(4). We would be pleased to receive written comments on your suggestion for modifying those time limits or on the alternative system outlined above.

Yours sincerely, Len Farber, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Department of Finance

Possible Future Amendment — 227(5.2)–(5.4)

(5.2) Interference with remittance — Where at any time

(a) an amount (in this subsection referred to as the "amount to be remitted") that is deducted or withheld from a payment (in this subsection referred to as the "gross payment") is required by a provision of this Act to be remitted by a particular person on account of the tax of another person,

(b) a secured creditor (as defined in subsection 224(1.3)) in relation to the particular person has influence over the issuance or clearance of the payment of the amount to be remitted, and

(c) the secured creditor, alone or together with another person, exercises that influence for the purpose of

(i) postponing the remittance of the amount to be remitted,

(ii) subordinating the remittance of the amount to be remitted, in favour of the payment of other amounts, or

(iii) causing the amount to be remitted not to be remitted, and the remittance of the amount to be remitted is postponed or subordinated or the amount to be remitted is not remitted, as the case may be,

the secured creditor

(d) is, for the purposes of subsections 135(3) and 153(1), section 215 and this section, deemed to be a person who made the gross payment and is deemed to be a person who deducted or withheld the amount to be remitted from the gross payment,

(e) is, notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, jointly and severally liable with the particular person to pay to the Receiver General

(i) all amounts payable by the particular person because of any of subsections 135(3) and 153(1) and section 215 in respect of the gross payment, and

(ii) all amounts payable under this Act by the particular person because of any failure to comply with any of those provisions in respect of the gross payment, and

(f) is entitled to deduct or withhold from any amount paid or credited by the secured creditor to the particular person, or otherwise recover from the particular person, any amount paid under this subsection by the secured creditor in respect of the amount to be remitted.

Technical Notes: New subsection 227(5.2) provides a new rule for imposing joint and several liability on certain secured creditors who interfere with the remittance of source deductions. Under this new rule it need not be established that a secured creditor actually causes or authorizes a payment — which is subject to source deduction — before joint and several liability arises. It is sufficient to show that an amount is deducted at source from a payment (hereafter referred to as a "gross payment") that the secured creditor has influence over the issuance or clearance of that gross payment and that the secured creditor exercises that influence for the purpose of interfering with the remittance of source deductions. Interference may take place by way of postponing a remittance, subordinating a remittance in favour of another payment or simply causing a remittance not to be made.

A typical example is the situation of a financial institution that has influential control over a person and that, in the course of providing banking services to the person (usually in financial difficulty) who is liable to deduct certain amounts from the remuneration of its employees, interferes with the remittance of these deductions by preventing the issuance of, stopping or refusing to clear a remittance cheque made to the Receiver General while issuing, clearing, or honouring other cheques made to suppliers or other creditors. This might be done in order to enhance trade receivables and limit the secured creditor's own risks.

Generally, it is not intended that the refusal of a cheque or other means of payment for lack of sufficient funds or other legitimate banking reasons be regarded as influence that is exercised for the purpose of interfering with the payment of source deductions. However, it is intended that a secured creditor that refuses to extend credit in respect of a source deduction payment and that subsequently extends credit in respect of other similar payments made to another party, be considered as exercising influence for the purpose of interfering with source deductions.

Where the circumstances described in new subsection 227(5.2) exist, the secured creditor will be deemed to have made the payment and will become jointly and severally liable with the person making the gross payment to pay all amounts payable in respect of the gross payment and all amounts payable by that person for the failure to deduct and remit the amounts payable. This will include the amount of tax not remitted, interest, and penalties. However, exceptions to this rule are contained in new subsections 227(5.3) and (5.4). A specific right to recover amounts paid by the secured creditor on behalf of the person making the gross payment is provided in paragraph 227(5.2)(f).

(5.3) Exception where all cheques stopped — Where on a day a secured creditor in relation to a person stops or refuses a cheque or other means of payment or remittance drawn on the secured creditor by the person for an amount to be remitted by the person to the Receiver General, subsection (5.2) does not apply in respect of that stopping or refusal if, throughout the period that begins at the end of that day and ends when the amount is paid to the Receiver General, the creditor stops or refuses all cheques and all other means of payment or remittance drawn on the creditor by the person (other than cheques payable, or other means of payment or remittance, to the Receiver General and other than cheques certified on or before that day).

Technical Notes: New subsections 227(5.3) and (5.4) provide certain exceptions to the joint and several liability rules which apply to secured creditors. Subsection 227(5.3) deals with the case in which a cheque or other means of payment is stopped or refused by the secured creditor. Joint and several liability will not arise in this case if the secured creditor also stops or refuses all other cheques presented and payments made starting immediately after that day, except cheques or payments made to the Receiver General or cheques certified on or before that day. Using the example of the financial institution that stops a remittance cheque (referred to in the commentary on subsection 227(5.2)), no joint and several liability would arise if the financial institution were to stop or refuse (until payment in full of the amount to be paid or remitted) all other cheques made to any other creditor of the person and presented at any time after the day on which it stopped the cheque payable to the Receiver General.

(5.4) Other exceptions — Where subsection (5.2) would, but for this subsection, apply to a secured creditor in relation to a person because the creditor has exercised influence in respect of an amount to be remitted by the person to the Receiver General, that subsection does not apply where

(a) the person does not make any payment or disbursement (other than payments or disbursements to the Receiver General) at and after the time referred to in that subsection until the amount to be remitted is paid to the Receiver General;

(b) the exercise of the influence is only a refusal, or an expression of intention to refuse, to supply to the person any further property or services until a payment for property sold or leased or services rendered to the person is received by the creditor; or

(c) the exercise of the influence is pursuant to a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal in Canada.

Technical Notes: Similarly, new subsection 227(5.4) provides relief from joint and several liability where a person does not make any other payment or disbursement at or after the time the secured creditor exercises influence in respect of an amount to be paid or remitted by the person to the Receiver General.

New paragraph 227(5.4)(b) provides, for greater certainty, that a refusal by a secured creditor to continue to supply property or services because of the non-payment for such property or services will not give rise to joint and several liability.

Under new paragraph 227(5.4)(c), court actions such as collection and conservation measures will not be regarded as exercising influence for the purpose of interfering with a remittance. In addition, where a court orders a secured creditor to make a payment in priority to a remittance, the secured creditor will not be regarded as having exercised influence for the purpose of interfering with a remittance.

Application: The December 12, 1995 Notice of Ways and Means Motion would have added subsecs. 227(5.2)–(5.4) as above (and would have numbered what is now 227(5.2) as 227(5.5)), to come into force on Royal Assent. However, these provisions (and the parallel rules in 323.1 of the Excise Tax Act for GST remittances) were dropped in the revised Notice of Ways and Means Motion of March 28, 1996 (Bill C-36 — 1995 Budget bill). Officials at the Department of Finance advise that implementation of these rules has been deferred following consultations with the banks and other financial institutions, which have promised voluntary compliance. Revenue Canada will monitor this compliance during 1996 and 1997, at the end of which period a determination will be made as to whether to proceed with these rules. As of June 1998, this review was still underway and a decision was expected in the next few months.

quent events or otherwise that the repayment was not made as part of a series of loans or other transactions and repayments, the Minister shall, on written application made no later than 2 years after the end of the calendar year in which the repayment is made, pay to the person an amount equal to the lesser of

Proposed Amendment — Delay in Operation of s. 233.3

Department of Finance/Revenue Canada news release, October 2, 1997: MINISTERS ANNOUNCE INDEPENDENT REVIEW OF FOREIGN INVESTMENT PROPERTY REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

National Revenue Minister Herb Dhaliwal and Finance Minister Paul Martin announced today that the Government will delay the requirement to report foreign investment property over $100,000 from the first reporting date of April 1998 to April 1999.

In the interim, the Auditor General of Canada, Mr. Denis Desautels, has been requested to examine this reporting requirement to assess whether it is the appropriate approach to ensure the proper reporting of world income. This review will include an examination of alternative mechanisms and may propose more effective measures.

Since its release, the requirement to report foreign investment property over $100,000 has prompted a number of questions concerning the effectiveness of this measure in combating tax evasion, the compliance burden associated with reporting foreign investments and privacy issues. The review will consider the broader implications of foreign investment property reporting including economic and investment issues. The Auditor General of Canada will submit his final report no later than May 30, 1998.

The trust and foreign affiliate tax reporting requirements announced for the 1998 tax-filing season are not included in the review and are still in effect. These requirements are to report transfers or loans of property to a foreign trust, to report distributions from a foreign trust, and to report any interests in foreign affiliates.

"Filing of the new foreign investment reporting return is on hold pending a review to determine if there is a better way to both facilitate compliance and enhance administration in the reporting of world income," said Mr. Dhaliwal. "Canadian residents have always been required to report all their world income on their annual tax returns. A delay in the introduction of this requirement does not change that."

Mr. Dhaliwal said, "I am taking this opportunity to emphasize that the foreign reporting rules are but one part of Revenue Canada's strategy to ensure compliance with the obligation to report world income and to combat tax evasion through the use of tax havens. The Government is committed to ensuring fairness."

The overall strategy to address the proper reporting of world income includes continuing to enhance audit activities directed at tax havens, using international tax organizations to exert pressure on tax haven countries to eliminate secrecy laws, and re-designing tax forms to emphasize the obligation to report world income.

As of October 2, 1997, the information returns relating to foreign affiliates and foreign trusts will be available on the Internet at http://www.rc.gc.ca. as well as on Revenue Canada's Electronic Document Distribution System (EDDS). Paper copies of these returns will be available in tax services offices by late October.

The government will introduce appropriate legislation to give effect to this delay.

Auditor General news release, June 5, 1998: Reporting of Certain Foreign Assets Requirement is Justified Because of a Threat to the Tax Base

The Auditor General of Canada, Denis Desautels, today released a report on his examination of the requirement to report specified foreign property under section 233.3 of the Income Tax Act. This review had been requested in October 1997 by the ministers of National Revenue and of Finance in light of growing concern over the need for this measure in combating tax evasion.

The new rule, which was introduced in the 1995 Budget, requires Canadians to report foreign bank accounts, rental property outside Canada, foreign securities and interests in foreign trusts, partnerships and other foreign entities. Its purpose is to give Revenue Canada a more complete picture of taxpayers' offshore investments so it can verify their tax returns.

After an in-depth review of the question, the Auditor General concludes that the requirement is justified and appropriate because there is a potentially serious erosion of the tax base.

"Canadians, increasingly, are investing offshore and there are signs that some are not reporting their foreign income to Revenue Canada. Therefore, they are not paying tax on this income," said Denis Desautels. "This violates the basic principle that residents of Canada are taxed on their worldwide income. It is also unfair to taxpayers who are reporting 100% of their income and who must shoulder a greater portion of the tax burden."

The report recommends that Revenue Canada do more to inform Canadians about the importance of reporting worldwide income and give new Canadians more information to help them understand their tax obligations. The report also recommends that Revenue Canada strengthen enforcement activities directed specifically at detecting unreported foreign-source income and suggests some technical modifications to the requirements.

The Report includes an appendix discussing concerns that were raised with the Auditor General by taxpayers during the course of the examination.

The Report entitled "Examination of the Requirement to Report Specified Foreign Property Under Section 233.3 of the Income Tax Act" is available on this Web site. A backgrounder is also available.

"short-term preferred share" of a corporation at any particular time means a share, other than a grandfathered share, of the capital stock of the corporation issued after December 15, 1987 that at that particular time

(a) is a share where, under the terms and conditions of the share, any agreement relating to the share or any modification of those terms and conditions or that agreement, the corporation or a specified person in relation to the corporation is or may, at any time within 5 years from the date of its issue, be required to redeem, acquire or cancel, in whole or in part, the share (unless the requirement to redeem, acquire or cancel the share arises only in the event of the death of the shareholder or by reason only of a right to convert or exchange the share) or to reduce the paid-up capital of the share, and for the purposes of this paragraph

(i) an agreement in respect of a share of the capital stock of a corporation shall be read without reference to that part of the agreement under which a person agrees to acquire the share for an amount

(A) in the case of a share (other than a share that would, but for that part of the agreement, be a taxable preferred share) the agreement in respect of which provides that the share is to be acquired within 60 days after the day on which the agreement was entered into, that does not exceed the greater of the fair market value of the share at the time the agreement was entered into, determined without reference to the agreement, and the fair market value of the share at the time of the acquisition, determined without reference to the agreement, or

(B) that does not exceed the fair market value of the share at the time of the acquisition, determined without reference to the agreement, or for an amount determined by reference to the assets or earnings of the corporation where that determination may reasonably be considered to be used to determine an amount that does not exceed the fair market value of the share at the time of the acquisition, determined without reference to the agreement, and

(ii) "shareholder" includes a shareholder of a shareholder, or

(b) is a share that is convertible or exchangeable at any time within 5 years from the date of its issue, unless

(C) both a share described in clause (A) and a right or warrant described in clause (B), and

by reference to the assets or earnings of the corporation where that determination may reasonably be considered to be used to determine an amount that does not exceed the fair market value of the share at the time of the acquisition, determined without reference to the agreement, and

(ii) "shareholder" includes a shareholder of a shareholder,

(f) where a share of the capital stock of a corporation was issued after December 15, 1987 and at the time the share was issued the existence of the corporation was, or there was an arrangement under which it could be, limited to a period that was within 5 years from the date of its issue, the share shall be deemed to be a short-term preferred share of the corporation unless the share is a grandfathered share and the arrangement is a written arrangement entered into before December 16, 1987,

Proposed Amendment — 250(1)(e)

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 24, 1998: Deemed residence

(41) That paragraph 250(1)(e) of the Act, which deems spouses of government employees and certain others to be residents of Canada, be repealed for spouses who, but for that paragraph, would cease to be residents of Canada after February 23, 1998 and for spouses who, but for that paragraph, would have ceased to be residents of Canada before February 24, 1998 and elect not to be subject to that paragraph after February 23, 1998.

(42) That a new rule be added to the Act, with application after February 23, 1998, to deem as a resident of Canada any person who, under an international agreement, is exempt from tax in their country of residence because of their relationship to a Canadian resident.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 24, 1998: Deemed residence

The distinction between residence and non-residence for tax purposes is an important one. Residents of Canada pay Canadian tax on their worldwide income; non-residents pay Canadian tax only on their Canadian-source income.

In most situations, whether or not an individual is resident in Canada is a question of fact: the answer depends on the nature of the individual's ties to Canada and the individual's intentions. In some cases, however, the Income Tax Act deems an individual to be resident in Canada whether or not those factual tests are met.

One of the deeming rules treats members of the Canadian Forces, certain development workers, Canadian Forces school staff, and officers and employees of the Government of Canada or a province (including ambassadors, ministers, high commissioners and others) as residents of Canada irrespective of where they are posted. In its current form, the rule also deems the spouses and dependent children of these persons to be Canadian residents.

The budget proposes to eliminate the special rule for spouses. In its place, a new rule is proposed which will deem as residents those individuals who, by virtue of their relationship to a Canadian resident, are exempt from tax in another country under a tax treaty or international agreement.

These changes will apply to individuals who would, but for the current deeming rule, cease to be residents of Canada after February 23, 1998. Individuals who, but for the current rule, would have ceased to be resident prior to February 24, 1998 will be permitted to elect that these changes also apply to them after February 23, 1998. If they make this election, they will be treated as having ceased to be resident in Canada on February 24, 1998.

Example

Louise is an employee of the Government of Canada who in 1996 was posted to the Canadian Embassy in Country X. Louise, her spouse David and their dependent child Celeste all moved to Country X, and all ceased to be factually resident in Canada. Under the existing rules, however, Louise, David and Celeste are all deemed to have remained resident in Canada.

Under the proposed new rule, Louise will still be treated as a Canadian resident, as will Celeste (assuming Celeste depends for support on Louise and does not have income exceeding the basic personal exemption amount). However, David will be treated as a Canadian resident only if, because of his relationship with Louise, a tax treaty or international agreement prevents Country X from taxing him.

Since David would, but for the special deeming rule, have ceased to be resident in Canada before February 24, 1998, he can choose whether or not the new rule will apply to him after February 23, 1998. If he chooses to have the new rule apply, and if he is not exempt from Country X tax, David will be treated as having ceased to be resident in Canada on February 24, 1998. It should be noted that this change in residence may itself have income tax consequences for David.

(f) was at any time in the year a child of, and dependent for support on, an individual to whom paragraph (b), (c), (d) or (d.1) applies and the person's income for the year did not exceed the amount used for the year under paragraph (c) of the description of B in subsection 118(1).

Proposed Amendment — Dual-resident individuals deemed non-resident

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 24, 1998: Dual-resident individuals

(39) That any individual who

(a) would otherwise be resident in Canada for the purposes of the Act at a particular time, and

(b) became after February 24, 1998, and is at the particular time, under an agreement between Canada and another country, entitled as a person resident in the other country for the purposes of the agreement to an exemption from, or a reduction in the rate of, a tax otherwise payable under the Act, be deemed not to be resident in Canada at that time.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 24, 1998: Dual-resident individuals

In some circumstances, two countries' tax systems may each treat an individual as resident in that country. Since most countries tax residents on their income from all sources, this raises the possibility of double taxation. To prevent that result, tax treaties include rules that can be used to decide in which country the individual is resident for the purposes of the treaty.

Currently, however, Canada's income tax system does not explicitly take these treaty "tie-breaker" rules into account. An individual may attempt to argue that the individual is at one and the same time resident in Canada under Canadian domestic rules (and therefore not subject to Canadian non-resident tax), and resident in the treaty country under the treaty (and therefore not subject to taxation as a resident of Canada).

To ensure that treaty and domestic rules cannot be set off in this contradictory manner, the budget proposes to treat as a non-resident any individual who would otherwise be resident in Canada but has become entitled under a tax treaty, as a resident of another country, to an exemption from or reduction in Canadian income tax. This change, which is comparable to a rule that already applies to corporations, will apply to individuals who become entitled to treaty benefits after February 24, 1998.

"securities lending arrangement" means an arrangement under which

(b) it may reasonably be expected, at the particular time, that the borrower will transfer or return after the particular time to the lender a security (in this section referred to as an "identical security") that is identical to the security so transferred or lent,

(c) where the qualified security is a share of the capital stock of a corporation, the borrower is obligated to pay to the lender amounts equal to and as compensation for all dividends, if any, paid on the security that would have been received by the borrower if the borrower had held the security throughout the period beginning after the particular time and ending at the time an identical security is transferred or returned to the lender, and

(d) the lender's risk of loss or opportunity for gain or profit with respect to the security is not changed in any material respect, but does not include an arrangement one of the main purposes of which may reasonably be considered to be to avoid or defer the inclusion in income of any gain or profit with respect to the security.

Related Provisions: 112(2.3) — Dividend rental arrangements; 248(1)"securities lending arrangement" — Definition applies to entire Act; 248(12) — Identical properties.

(5) Deemed dividend — For the purposes of this Act, any amount received (other than an amount received as proceeds of disposition or an amount received by a corporation under an arrangement where it may reasonably be considered that one of the main reasons for the corporation entering into the arrangement was to enable it to receive an amount that would otherwise have been deemed by this subsection to be a dividend)

18. (1) General depreciation provisions — Where the capital cost to a taxpayer of any depreciable property that was acquired by him before 1972 was required by any provision of the old law to be determined for the purpose of computing the amount of any deduction under any such provision in respect of that property, or would have been required by any provision of the old law to be determined for that purpose if any deduction under any such provision had been claimed by the taxpayer in respect of that property, the amount of the capital cost so required to be determined or that would have been so required to be determined, as the case may be, shall be deemed, for all purposes of the amended Act, to be the capital cost to the taxpayer of that property.

(2) Idem — Where a taxpayer has acquired depreciable property before the beginning of the 1949 taxation year, for the purposes of section 13 of the amended Act and any regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a) of that Act an amount equal to the total of

(1) Depreciable property — Where the capital cost to a taxpayer of any depreciable property acquired by the taxpayer before 1972 and owned by the taxpayer without interruption from December 31, 1971 until such time after 1971 as the taxpayer disposed of it is less than the fair market value of the property on valuation day and less than the proceeds of disposition thereof otherwise determined,

(a) for the purposes of section 13 of the amended Act, subdivision c of Division B of Part I of that Act and any regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a) of that Act, the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the property shall be deemed to be an amount equal to the total of its capital cost to the taxpayer and the amount, if any, by which the proceeds of disposition thereof otherwise determined exceed the fair market value of the property on valuation day;

(b) where the property has, by one or more transactions or events (other than the death of a taxpayer to which subsection 70(5) of the amended Act applies) between persons not dealing at arm's length, become vested in another taxpayer

(i) for the purposes of the amended Act (other than, where paragraph 13(7)(e) of that Act applies in determining the capital cost to that other taxpayer of the property, for the purposes of paragraphs 8(1)(j) and (p) and sections 13 and 20 of that Act), that other taxpayer shall be deemed to have acquired the property at a capital cost equal to the proceeds deemed to have been received for the property by the person from whom that other taxpayer acquired the property, and

(ii) for the purposes of this subsection, that other taxpayer shall be deemed to have acquired the property before 1972 at a capital cost equal to the capital cost of the property to the taxpayer who actually owned the property at the end of 1971, and to have owned it without interruption from December 31, 1971 until such time after 1971 as that other taxpayer disposed of it; and

(c) where the disposition occurred because of an election under subsection 110.6(19) of the amended Act,

(i) for the purposes of that Act (other than paragraphs 8(1)(j) and (p) and sections 13 and 20 of that Act), the taxpayer is deemed to have reacquired the property at a capital cost equal to

(A) where the amount designated in respect of the property in the election did not exceed 110% of the fair market value of the property at the end of February 22, 1994, the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition determined under paragraph (a) in respect of the disposition of the property that immediately preceded the reacquisition minus the amount, if any, by which the amount designated in respect of the property in the election exceeded that fair market value, and

(B) in any other case, the amount otherwise determined under subsection 110.6(19) of that Act to be the cost to the taxpayer of the property immediately after the reacquisition referred to in that subsection minus the amount by which the fair market value of the property on valuation day exceeded the capital cost of the property at the time it was last acquired before 1972, and

(ii) for the purposes of this subsection, the taxpayer's capital cost of the property after the reacquisition shall be deemed to be equal to the taxpayer's capital cost of the property before the reacquisition and the taxpayer shall be considered to have owned the property without interruption from December 31, 1971 until such time after February 22, 1994 as the taxpayer disposes of it.

(A) the total of such of the amounts that were included in computing the taxpayer's income for that or a preceding taxation year as were receivable by the taxpayer at the end of the fiscal period of the proprietorship ending in the taxation year,

(B) the amount claimed under paragraph 20(1)(l) of the amended Act as a reserve for doubtful debts in computing the taxpayer's income from the business for the fiscal period of the proprietorship ending in the year, and

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount, in respect of each partnership by means of which the taxpayer carried on that business before 1972, equal to such portion of the total that would be determined under paragraph (a) in respect of the partnership, if the references in that paragraph to "the taxpayer" were read as references to "the partnership", as is designated by the taxpayer in the taxpayer's return of income under Part I of the amended Act for the year to be attributable to the taxpayer, except that where the total of the portions so designated by all members of the partnership is less than the total that would be so determined under paragraph (a) in respect of the partnership, the Minister may designate the portion of that total that is attributable to the taxpayer, in which case the portion so designated by the Minister in respect of the taxpayer shall be deemed to be the portion so designated by the taxpayer.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 100(1)"remuneration"(j.1)

Proposed Amendment — Reporting Payments in the Construction Industry

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 27, 1995: The budget proposes that a new information reporting system be introduced to require certain payments made after 1995 within the construction industry to be reported to Revenue Canada. The payments to be reported will be those made to or on behalf of a person for the provision of goods and services in the course of activities related to the construction, alteration, repair or removal of any structure by that person. Reporting will be required only where the payment is made by a person in a construction business.

Subcontracting in the construction industry has grown in response to business requirements for greater flexibility and control over projects. This has led to a move away from employer-employee relationships and contributed to increased tax compliance problems in the industry. Unlike payments to employees, there is no existing requirement to report to Revenue Canada payments made to subcontractors.

Revenue Canada's stepped up enforcement efforts in the construction sector and industry representations have indicated a relatively high level of non-compliance, particularly with respect to the reporting of income. As well, in consultations with construction industry associations over the past year, firms in the home building industry have expressed their frustration at the difficulties in competing with businesses that operate within the underground economy, often by contracting work out "under the table".

Revenue Canada will consult with the construction industry to develop a system of reporting which minimizes the compliance burden on payers while providing the information necessary to verify compliance with the tax laws. The Minister of National Revenue will announce details of these consultations shortly.

Revenue Canada news release, June 13, 1996: National Revenue Minister Jane Stewart, together with leading representatives of Canada's construction and home-building industry and building trade unions, today introduce a new reporting system to combat the underground economy in the construction and home-building sector.

"This initiative is a major step forward in Revenue Canada's efforts to fight the underground economy", said Minister Stewart. "It will help to ensure that everyone in the construction and home-building industry operates under the same set of rules. The new system is a win-win-win situation for the industry, its workers, and Canadian taxpayers".

The system combines voluntary compliance with new reporting guidelines on contractor payments and a program of targeted enforcement.

The new rules apply to all individuals, partnerships, and corporations whose principal business is construction and who make payments to contractors providing construction services. This includes individuals and businesses who are not required to register for the goods and services tax because they have reported sales of less than $30,000.

The system encourages individuals and businesses to voluntarily report all payments they make to contractors who provide construction services. Revenue Canada will focus increased attention on high-risk areas within the industry with low voluntary reporting rates.

"The Canadian Construction Association supports initiatives, like this new reporting system, which are intended to level the playing field for taxpayers — so long as they do not impose an onerous administrative burden on law-abiding businesses", said CCA Chairman Brian Scoggs.

"Revenue Canada is setting an example of how government should do business", stated Jerry Roehr, President of the Canadian Home Builders' Association. "The Department has listed to our concerns, and has made an honest effort to develop and introduce a new reporting system that will minimize the reporting burden on our members, and reduce opportunities for under-the-table contractors to undermine legitimate new home builders and renovator. It demonstrates how government and business can work together in partnership to achieve mutual objectives".

"The underground economy hurts us all", continued Guy Dumoulin, Executive Secretary of the building and construction Trades Department AFL-CIO. "This initiative is definitely a step in the right direction. It will help protect honest jobs and good wages in a critical employment sector of the Canadian economy".

Initially, the new reporting system will be voluntary, and retroactive to payments made to construction contractors since January 1, 1995. Revenue Canada will evaluate the system in the fall of 1996, in cooperation with business and labour representatives of the construction industry. Based on this review, Revenue Canada will consider making the new reporting system mandatory in 1997.

Finance Minister Paul Martin announced the new system in the 1996 budget. Revenue Canada developed it in consultation with representatives of the construction industry, including the Building and construction Trades Department AFL-CIO, the Canadian Construction Association, the Canadian Home Builders' Association, the Interior Systems Contractors Association, and the Multi-Employer Benefit Plan Council of Canada.

In addition to the construction industry, federal government departments and agencies will participate in the new reporting system. Revenue Canada is also working with provincial governments to ensure their participation.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 24, 1998: The Underground economy: reporting of federal and construction contracts

The federal government has a comprehensive strategy to fight the underground economy. The budget proposes further measures to improve tax compliance and the fairness of the tax system.

Experience has shown that the accuracy of income reporting for tax purposes is better for sources of income for which information slips are issued. For instance, virtually all wages and salaries are voluntarily reported for income tax purposes compared to approximately 85% of self-employment income. The higher tax compliance for wage and salary income is partly due to the mandatory requirement on employers to report to Revenue Canada the wage and salary payments made to each of their employees. To further improve tax compliance, the budget proposes enhanced reporting requirements for contract payments.

Federal government departments and agencies will begin issuing information slips for contract payments made after 1997, as will federal Crown corporations for contract payments made after 1998.

The construction contract reporting system introduced in the 1995 budget will become mandatory for payments made after 1998. Contract reporting was first introduced in the construction industry because Revenue Canada's compliance activities revealed an active underground economy and consultations with industry associations indicated that it was becoming difficult for complying businesses to remain competitive. The construction contract payment reporting system was introduced to help restore a level playing field in the industry by improving compliance in the reporting of income.

The reporting system was introduced on a voluntary basis in 1995 to allow the federal government to develop, with the construction industry, a system that would be simple for the industry to comply with and would deliver the information needed by Revenue Canada for enforcement. The industry's suggestions have resulted in numerous modifications to the original reporting system. Experience with the voluntary system also demonstrated that mandatory reporting is necessary to obtain the level of participation needed to achieve effective compliance.

Subject to further consultation with industry stakeholders, it is intended that:

- mandatory reporting be required of individuals, partnerships, trusts and corporations whose principal business is construction;
- reporting to Revenue Canada be required on an annual basis for payments made to contractors for construction services;
- construction services include activities such as erection, installation, alteration, modification, repair, improvement, demolition, dismantling and removal of a structure, surface or subsurface construction or any similar property; and
- reporting be required for service and mixed service and goods contracts, but not goods-only contracts.

Revenue Canada will consult with representatives of the construction industry on the specifics of the reporting system. It will also consult on how best to ensure that the intended purposes are achieved. The Minister of National Revenue will shortly issue a press release with details on the consultation process.

Finally, the federal government will continue discussing contract reporting with provincial governments and assessing the extent of underground activity in other sectors of the economy to determine if further action is warranted.

Revenue Canada news release, February 25, 1998: SUB-CONTRACT REPORTING TO BE FOCUS OF CONSULTATIONS

The Honourable Herb Dhaliwal, Minister of National Revenue and M.P. (Vancouver South-Burnaby), announced today that Revenue Canada will be consulting with construction industry associations and unions on the implementation of the sub-contracting reporting initiative announced by the Honourable Paul Martin in the Budget tabled yesterday in the House of Commons.

Mr. Dhaliwal highlighted the importance of addressing underground economic activity in the construction industry. "We need to ensure that there is a level playing field for business, but at the same time we recognize that there is a critical need to minimize compliance costs, especially for small and medium-sized businesses," the Minister said.

Revenue Canada will be working with industry and union representatives over the next few months to determine how best to implement sub-contractor reporting, including examining alternative ways in which the information can be provided.

"This consultation process is extremely important," said Mr. Dhaliwal. "We will make every effort to ensure that the concerns of small and medium-sized businesses are heard and addressed."

Mr. Dhaliwal also pointed out that the Government is resuming the reporting of payments to all federal government service contractors. Reporting begins in 1998 for federal departments and agencies, and in 1999 for federal Crown Corporations. This initiative complements measures taken by provinces such as New Brunswick and Newfoundland who report similar information.

"By working in partnership with our key stakeholders and doing our part to report payments to contractors, the Government is demonstrating its commitment to addressing the underground economy," the Minister said.

Mr. Dhaliwal said that the consultations with the construction industry on the most effective approach for sub-contractor reporting will be concluded by the end of the summer.

Heading substituted by P.C. 1968-33, subsec. 1(1), January 4, 1968, Canada Gazette, Part II, January 24, 1968.

300. Capital element of annuity payments — (1) For the purposes of paragraphs 32.1(3)(b) and 60(a) of the Act, where an annuity is paid under a contract (other than an income-averaging annuity contract or an annuity contract purchased pursuant to a deferred profit sharing plan or pursuant to a plan referred to in subsection 147(15) of the Act as a "revoked plan") at a particular time, that part of the annuity payment determined in prescribed manner to be a return of capital is that proportion of a taxpayer's interest in the annuity payment that the adjusted purchase price of the taxpayer's interest in the contract at that particular time is of his interest, immediately before the commencement under the contract of payments to which paragraph 56(1)(d) of the Act applies, in the total of the payments

(a) to be made under the contract, in the case of a contract for a term of years certain; or

(b) expected to be made under the contract, in the case of a contract under which the continuation of the payments depends in whole or in part on the survival of an individual.

History: Subsec. 300(1) substituted by P.C. 1983-3530, subsec. 1(1), November 17, 1983, Canada Gazette, Part II, November 24, 1983, applicable to taxation years commencing after 1982.

Subsec. 300(1) substituted by P.C. 1982-1421, subsec. 1(1), May 13, 1982, Canada Gazette, Part II, May 26, 1982, effective with respect to annuity contracts under which annuity payments commence after 1979 except that in its application to annuity contracts under which payments commence before 1982 it shall be read as follows:

> 300. (1) For the purposes of paragraphs 32.1(3)(b) and 60(a) of the Act, if an annuity is paid under a contract, the amount deemed to be a return of capital is that proportion of each annuity payment that the consideration for, or purchase price of, the contract is of the total of the payments
> (a) to be made under the contract, in the case of a contract for a term of years certain; or
> (b) expected to be made, in the case of a contract under which the continuation of the payments depends in whole or in part on the survival of an individual.

(1.1) For the purposes of subsections (1) and (2), "annuity payment" does not include any portion of a payment under a contract the amount of which cannot be reasonably determined immediately before the commencement of payments under the contract except where the payment of such portion cannot be so determined because the continuation of the annuity payments under the contract depends in whole or in part on the survival of an individual.

History: Subsec. 300(1.1) added by P.C. 1982-1421, subsec. 1(1), May 13, 1982, Canada Gazette, Part II, May 26, 1982, effective with respect to annuity contracts under which annuity payments commence after 1981.

(2) For the purposes of this section and section 305,

(a) where the continuance of the annuity payments under any contract depends in whole or in part on the survival of an individual, the total of the payments expected to be made under the contract

(i) shall, in the case of a contract that provides for equal payments and does not provide for a guaranteed period of payment, be equal to the product obtained by multiplying the aggregate of the annuity payments expected to be received throughout a year under the contract by the complete expectations of life using the table of mortality known as the 1971 Individual Annuity Mortality Table as published in Volume XXIII of the Transactions of the Society of Actuaries, or

(ii) shall, in any other case, be calculated in accordance with subparagraph (i) with such modifications as the circumstances may require;

(b) except as provided in subsections (3) and (4), "adjusted purchase price" of a taxpayer's interest in an annuity contract at a particular time means the amount that would be determined at that time in respect of that interest under paragraph 148(9)(a) [148(9)"adjusted cost basis"] of the Act if that paragraph were read without reference to subparagraph (viii) [k] thereof;

(c) where the continuance of the annual payments under any contract depends on the survival of a person, the age of that person on any date as of which a calculation is being made shall be determined by subtracting the calendar year of his birth from the calendar year in which such date occurs; and

(d) where the continuance of the annual payments under any contract depends on the survival of a person, and where, in the event of the death of that person before the annual payments aggregate a stated sum, the contract provides that the unpaid balance of the stated sum shall be paid, either in a lump sum or instalments, then, for the purpose of determining the expected term of the contract, the contract shall be deemed to provide for the continuance of the payments thereunder for a minimum term certain equal to the nearest integral number of years required to complete the payment of the stated sum;

(e) [Revoked]

301. Life annuity contracts — (1) For the purposes of this Part and section 148 of the Act, "life annuity contract" means any contract under which a person authorized under the laws of Canada or a province to carry on in Canada an annuities business agrees to make annuity payments to an individual (in this section referred to as "the annuitant") or jointly to two or more individuals (each of whom is referred to as "the annuitant" in this section), which payments are, by the terms of the contract,

(a) to be paid annually or at more frequent periodic intervals;

(b) to commence on a specified day; and

(c) to continue throughout the lifetime of the annuitant or one or more of the annuitants.

History: All that portion of subsec. 301(1) preceding para. (a) substituted by P.C. 1983-3530, s. 2, November 17, 1983, Canada Gazette, Part II, November 24, 1983, effective November 12, 1981.

(f) the contract provides that all or a portion of the proceeds payable at any particular time under the contract may be received in the form of an annuity contract other than a life annuity contract.

(b) such proportion of the amount determined under paragraph (a) that the annuity payments made under the contract before the rights of the holder have ceased is of the total of the payments expected to be made under the contract, and

(c) the aggregate of all amounts, each of which is an amount in respect of the contract that was deductible in computing the income of the holder for the year or any previous year by virtue of subsection (2), the amount of such excess may be deducted by the holder under subsection 20(19) of the Act in computing his income for the year.

History: Para. 303(1)(b) substituted by P.C. 1983-3530, s. 4, November 17, 1983, Canada Gazette, Part II, November 24, 1983, effective commencing November 12, 1981.

304. Prescribed annuity contracts — (1) For the purposes of this Part and subsections 12.2(1), (3) and (4) and paragraph 148(2)(b) of the Act, prescribed annuity contract for a taxation year means

(a) an annuity contract purchased pursuant to a registered pension plan, a registered retirement savings plan, a deferred profit sharing plan or a plan referred to in subsection 147(15) of the Act as a revoked plan;

(b) an annuity contract described in paragraph 148(1)(c) or (e) of the Act; and

(c) an annuity contract

(i) under which annuity payments have commenced in the taxation year or a preceding taxation year,

(ii) issued by a corporation described in any of paragraphs 39(5)(b) to (d) or clause 146(1)(j)(ii)(B) [146(1)"retirement savings plan"(b)(ii)] of the Act, a life insurance corporation, a registered charity or a corporation (other than a mutual fund corporation or a mortgage investment corporation) the principal business of which is the making of loans (which corporation or charity is in this section referred to as an "issuer"),

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 304(1)(c)(ii)

(ii) issued by a life insurance corporation, a registered charity, a corporation referred to in any of paragraphs (a) to (c) of the definition "specified financial institution" in subsection 248(1) of the Act or subparagraph (b)(ii) of the definition "retirement savings plan" in subsection 146(1) of the Act or a corporation (other than a mutual fund corporation or a mortgage investment corporation) the principal business of which is the making of loans (which corporation or charity is referred to in this section as the "issuer"),

Application: The June 1, 1995 draft regulations (securities held by financial institutions), s. 1, will amend subpara. 304(1)(c)(ii) to read as above, applicable after February 22, 1994.

Technical Notes: Section 304 prescribes certain annuity contracts for exclusion from the rules in the Income Tax Act that require income from insurance policies to be reported on an accrual basis. Paragraph 304(1)(c) provides an exclusion for an annuity under which payments have commenced if a number of other conditions are also satisfied. Subparagraph 304(1)(c)(ii) requires that the annuity have been issued by a person specified in that provision. Acceptable issuers include corporations described in any of paragraphs 39(5)(b) to (d) of the Act — banks, trust companies and credit unions.

Subsection 39(5) of the Act is being amended to replace several of its paragraphs by a reference to "financial institutions" (as defined in subsection 142.2(1) of the Act). Consequently, subparagraph 304(1)(c)(ii) is amended to refer to corporations referred to in any of paragraphs (a) to (c) of the definition of "specified financial institution" in subsection 248(1) of the Act, which are the same corporations as were referred to in paragraphs 39(5)(b) to (d).

(iii) each holder of which

(A) is an individual, other than a trust that is neither a testamentary trust nor a trust described in paragraph 104(4)(a) of the Act (in this paragraph referred to as a "spouse trust"),

(B) is an annuitant under the contract, and

(C) throughout the taxation year, dealt at arm's length with the issuer,

(iv) the terms and conditions of which require that, from the time the contract meets the requirements of this paragraph,

(A) all payments made out of the contract be equal annuity payments made at regular intervals but not less frequently than annually, subject to the holder's right to vary the frequency and quantum of payments to be made out of the contract in any taxation year without altering the present value at the beginning of the year of the total payments to be made in that year out of the contract,

(B) the annuity payments thereunder continue for a fixed term or

(I) where the holder is an individual (other than a trust), for the life of the first holder or until the later of the death of the first holder and the death of any one of the spouse, brothers and sisters (in this subparagraph referred to as "the survivor") of the first holder, or

(II) where the holder is a spouse trust, for the life of the spouse who is entitled to receive the income of the trust;

(C) where the annuity payments are to be made over a term that is guaranteed or fixed, the guaranteed or fixed term not [to] extend beyond the time at which

(I) in the case of a joint and last survivor annuity, the younger of the first holder and the survivor,

(II) where the holder is a spouse trust, the spouse who is entitled to receive the income of the trust,

(III) where the holder is a testamentary trust other than a spouse trust, the youngest beneficiary under the trust,

(IV) where the contract is held jointly, the younger of the first holders, or

(V) in any other case, the first holder, would, if he survived, attain the age of 91 years,

(D) no loans exist under the contract and the holder's rights under the contract not be disposed of otherwise than on the holder's death or, where the holder is a spouse trust, on the death of the spouse who is entitled to receive the income of the trust, and

(E) no payments be made out of the contract other than as permitted by this section,

(v) none of the terms and conditions of which provide for any recourse against the issuer for failure to make any payment under the contract, and

(vi) where annuity payments under the contract have commenced

(A) before 1987, in respect of which a holder thereof has notified the issuer in writing, before the end of the taxation year, that the contract is to be treated as a prescribed annuity contract,

(B) after 1986, in respect of which a holder thereof has not notified the issuer in writing, before the end of the taxation year in which the annuity payments under the contract commenced, that the contract is not to be treated as a prescribed annuity contract, or

(C) after 1986, in respect of which a holder thereof has notified the issuer in writing, before the end of the taxation year in which the annuity payments under the contract commenced, that the contract is not to be treated as a prescribed annuity contract and a holder thereof has rescinded the notification by so notifying the issuer in writing before the end of the taxation year.

Proposed Amendment — Reg. 304(1)

Department of Finance news release, December 19, 1996: An annuity contract issued as a RRIF will not be subject to the accrual rules under section 12.2 of the Act.

This amendment will be implemented by way of an amendment to subsection 304(1) of the Regulations. It is contemplated that it will apply to taxation years that begin after 1986, given that the original amendments to the Act that gave rise to the need for this amendment applied after 1986.

[For the full text of this news release, see under 12.2(1) — ed.]

Department of Finance news release, October 23, 1997: [See under ITA 12.2(1) — ed.]

(2) Notwithstanding subsection (1), an annuity contract shall not fail to be a prescribed annuity contract by reason that

(a) where the contract provides for a joint and last survivor annuity or is held jointly, the terms and conditions thereof provide that there will be a decrease in the amount of the annuity payments to be made under the contract from the time of death of one of the annuitants thereunder;

(b) the terms and conditions thereof provide that where the holder thereof dies at or before the time he attains the age of 91 years, the contract will terminate and an amount will be paid out of the contract not exceeding the amount, if any, by which the total premiums paid under the contract exceeds the total annuity payments made under the contract;

(c) where the annuity payments are to be made over a term that is guaranteed or fixed, the terms and conditions thereof provide that as a consequence of the death of the holder thereof during the guaranteed or fixed term any payments that, but for the death of the holder, would be made during the term may be commuted into a single payment; or

(d) the terms and conditions thereof, as they read on December 1, 1982 and at all subsequent times, provide that the holder participates in the investment earnings of the issuer and that the amount of such participation is to be paid within 60 days after the end of the year in respect of which it is determined.

(3) For the purposes of this section, the annuitant under an annuity contract is deemed to be the holder of the contract where

(a) the contract is held by another person in trust for the annuitant; or

(b) the contract was acquired by the annuitant under a group term life insurance policy under which life insurance was effected on the life of another person in respect of, in the course of, or by virtue of the office or employment or former office or employment of that other person.

(4) In this section,

"annuitant" under an annuity contract, at any time, means a person who, at that time, is entitled to receive annuity payments under the contract;

"spouse" of a particular person means

(a) a person of the opposite sex who is married to the particular person or who is a party to a void or voidable marriage with the particular person, or

(b) a person of the opposite sex who is cohabiting with the particular person in a conjugal relationship and has so cohabited for a period of at least one year.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-87R2: Policyholders' income from life insurance policies.

305. Unallocated income accrued before 1982 — (1) For the purposes of section 12.2 and paragraph 56(1)(d.1) of the Act, the amount at any time of "unallocated income accrued in respect of the interest before 1982, as determined in prescribed manner", in respect of a taxpayer's interest in an annuity contract (other than an interest last acquired after December 1, 1982) or in a life insurance policy referred to in subsection (3), means the amount, if any, by which

(a) the accumulating fund at December 31, 1981 in respect of the interest

exceeds the aggregate of

(b) his adjusted cost basis (within the meaning assigned by paragraph 148(9)(a) [148(9)"adjusted cost basis"] of the Act) at December 31, 1981 in respect of the interest; and

(c) that proportion of the amount, if any, by which the amount determined under paragraph (a) exceeds the amount determined under paragraph (b) that

(i) the aggregate of all amounts each of which is the amount of an annuity payment received before that time in respect of the interest is of

(ii) the taxpayer's interest, immediately before the commencement of payments under the contract, in the total of the annuity payments

(A) to be made under the contract, in the case of a contract for a term of years certain, or

(B) expected to be made under the contract, in the case of a contract under which the continuation of the payments depends in whole or in part on the survival of an individual.

(2) For the purposes of paragraph (1)(c), "annuity payment" does not include any portion of a payment under a contract the amount of which cannot be reasonably determined immediately before the commencement of payments under the contract except where such portion cannot be so determined because the continuation of the annuity payments under the contract depends in whole or in part on the survival of an individual.

(3) For the purposes of this section, an interest in an annuity contract to which subsection 12.2(9) of the Act applies shall be deemed to be a continuation of the interest in the life insurance policy in respect of which it was issued.

306. Exempt policies — (1) For the purposes of this Part and subsection 12.2(11) of the Act, "exempt policy" at any time means a life insurance policy (other than an annuity contract or a deposit administration fund policy) in respect of which the following conditions are met at that time:

(a) if that time is a policy anniversary of the policy, the accumulating fund of the policy at that time (determined without regard to any policy loan) does not exceed the total of the accumulating funds at that time of the exemption test policies issued at or before that time in respect of the policy;

(b) assuming that the terms and conditions of the policy do not change from those in effect on the last policy anniversary of the policy at or before that time and, where necessary, making reasonable assumptions about all other factors (including, in the case of a participating life insurance policy within the meaning assigned by subsection 138(12) of the Act, the assumption that the amounts of dividends paid will be as shown in the dividend scale), it is reasonable to expect that the condition in paragraph (a) will be met on each policy anniversary of the policy on which the policy could remain in force after that time and before the date determined under subparagraph (3)(d)(ii) with respect to the exemption test policies issued in respect of the policy;

(c) the condition in paragraph (a) was met on all policy anniversaries of the policy before that time; and

(d) the condition in paragraph (b) was met at all times on and after the first policy anniversary of the policy and before that time.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-87R2: Policyholders' income from life insurance policies.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), a life insurance policy that is an exempt policy on its first policy anniversary shall be deemed to have been an exempt policy from the time of its issue until that anniversary.

(3) For the purposes of this section and section 307, a separate exemption test policy shall be deemed to have been issued to a policyholder in respect of a life insurance policy

(a) on the date of issue of the life insurance policy, and

(b) on each policy anniversary of the life insurance policy where the amount of the benefit on death thereunder exceeds 108 per cent of the amount of the benefit on death thereunder on the later of the date of its issue and the date of its preceding anniversary, if any,

and, for the purpose of determining whether the accumulating fund of the life insurance policy on any particular policy anniversary meets the condition in paragraph (1)(a), each such exemption test policy shall be deemed

(c) to have a benefit on death that is uniform throughout the term of the exemption test policy and equal to

(i) where the exemption test policy is the first such policy issued in respect of the life insurance policy, the amount on that policy anniversary of the benefit on death of the life insurance policy less the total of all amounts each of which is the amount on that policy anniversary of the benefit on death of another exemption test policy issued on or before that policy anniversary in respect of the life insurance policy, and

(ii) in any other case, the amount by which the benefit on death of the life insurance policy on the date the exemption test policy was issued exceeds 108 per cent of the amount of the benefit on death of the life insurance policy on the later of the date of issue of the life insurance policy and the date of its preceding policy anniversary, if any;

(d) to pay the amount of its benefit on death on the earlier of

(i) the date of death of the person whose life is insured under the life insurance policy, and

(ii) the later of

(A) ten years after the date of issue of the life insurance policy, and

(B) the date that the person whose life is insured would, if he survived, attain the age of 85 years; and

(e) to be a life insurance policy in Canada issued by a life insurer that carried on its life insurance business in Canada.

(4) Notwithstanding subsections (1) to (3),

(a) where at any particular time the amount of the benefit on death of a life insurance policy is reduced, an amount equal to such reduction (such amount is in this paragraph referred to as "the reduction") shall be applied at that time to reduce the amount of the benefit on death of exemption test policies issued before that time in respect of the life insurance policy (other than the exemption test policy issued in respect thereof pursuant to paragraph (3)(a)), in the order in which the dates of their issuance are proximate to the particular time, by an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) the portion, if any, of the reduction not applied to reduce the benefit on death of one or more other such exemption test policies, and

(ii) the amount, immediately before that time, of the benefit on death of the relevant exemption test policy;

(b) where on the tenth or on any subsequent policy anniversary of a life insurance policy, the accumulating fund thereof (computed without regard to any policy loan then outstanding in respect of the policy) exceeds 250 per cent of the accumulating fund thereof on its third preceding policy anniversary (computed without regard to any policy loan then outstanding in respect of the policy), each exemption test policy deemed by subsection (3) to have been issued before that time in respect of the life insurance policy shall be deemed to have been issued on the later of the date of that third preceding policy anniversary and the date on which it was deemed by subsection (3) to have been issued; and

(c) where at one or more times after December 1, 1982

(i) a prescribed premium has been paid by a taxpayer in respect of an interest in a life insurance policy (other than an annuity contract or a deposit administration fund policy) last acquired on or before that date, or

(ii) an interest in a life insurance policy (other than an annuity contract or a deposit administration fund policy) issued on or before that date has been acquired by a taxpayer from the person who held the interest continuously since that date, the policy shall be deemed to have been an exempt policy from the date of its issue until the earliest of those times that occurred after December 1, 1982; and

(d) a life insurance policy that ceases to be an exempt policy (other than by reason of its conversion into an annuity contract) on a policy anniversary shall be deemed to be an exempt policy on that anniversary

(i) if, had that anniversary occurred 60 days after the date on which it did in fact occur, the policy would have been an exempt policy on that later date, or

(ii) if the person whose life is insured under the policy dies on that anniversary or within 60 days thereafter.

(a) with respect to a life insurance policy issued after March 26, 1992, other than a policy for which written application was made on or before March 26, 1992; and

(b) with respect to a life insurance policy amended at any time after March 26, 1992 to increase the amount of the benefit on death.

S. 306 added by P.C. 1983-3530, s. 5, November 17, 1983, Canada Gazette, Part II, November 24, 1983, applicable to taxation years commencing after 1982.

307. Accumulating funds — (1) For the purposes of this Part and section 12.2, paragraph 56(1)(d.1) and section 148 of the Act, "accumulating fund" at any particular time means,

(a) in respect of a taxpayer's interest in an annuity contract (other than a contract issued by a life insurer), the amount that is the greater of

(i) the amount, if any, by which the cash surrender value of his interest at that time exceeds the amount payable, if any, in respect of a loan outstanding at that time made under the contract in respect of the interest, and

(ii) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the present value at that time of future payments to be made out of the contract in respect of his interest

exceeds the aggregate of

(B) the present value at that time of future premiums to be paid under the contract in respect of his interest, and

(C) the amount payable, if any, in respect of a loan outstanding at that time, made under the contract in respect of his interest;

(b) in respect of a taxpayer's interest in a life insurance policy (other than an exemption test policy or an annuity contract to which paragraph (1)(a) applies), the product obtained when,

(i) where the policy is not a deposit administration fund policy and the particular time is immediately after the death of any person on whose life the life insurance policy is issued or effected, the aggregate of the maximum amounts that could be determined by the life insurer immediately before the death in respect of the policy under paragraph 1401(1)(c) and subparagraph 1401(1)(d)(i) if the mortality rates used were adjusted to reflect the assumption that the death would occur at the time and in the manner that it did occur, and

(ii) in any other case, the maximum amount that could be determined at that particular time by the life insurer under paragraph 1401(1)(a), computed as though there were only one deposit administration fund policy, or under paragraph 1401(1)(c), as the case may be, in respect of the policy is multiplied by

(iii) the taxpayer's proportionate interest in the policy, assuming for the purposes of this paragraph that the life insurer carried on its life insurance business in Canada, its taxation year ended at the particular time and the policy was a life insurance policy in Canada; and

(c) in respect of an exemption test policy,

(i) where the policy was issued at least 20 years before the particular time, the amount that would be determined at that particular time by the life insurer under clause 1401(1)(c)(ii)(A) in respect of the policy if the insurer's taxation year ended at that particular time, and

(ii) in any other case, the product obtained when the amount that would be determined under subparagraph (i) in respect of the policy on its twentieth policy anniversary is multiplied by the quotient obtained when the number of years since the policy was issued is divided by 20.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), when computing the accumulating fund of an interest described in

(a) paragraph (1)(a), the amounts determined under clauses (1)(a)(ii)(A) and (B) shall be computed using,

(i) where an interest rate for a period used by the issuer when the contract was issued in determining the terms of the contract was less than any rate so used for a subsequent period, the single rate that would, if it applied for each period, have produced the same terms, and

(ii) in any other case, the rates used by the issuer when the contract was issued in determining the terms of the contract;

(b) paragraph (1)(b), where an interest rate used for a period by a life insurer in computing the relevant amounts in paragraph 1403(1)(a) or (b) is determined under paragraph 1403(1)(c), (d) or (e), as the case may be, and that rate is less than an interest rate so determined for a subsequent period, the single rate that could, if it applied for each period, have been used in determining the premiums for the policy shall be used; and

(c) paragraph (1)(c)

(i) the rates of interest and mortality used and the age of the person whose life is insured shall be the same as those used in computing the amounts described in paragraph 1403(1)(a) or (b) in respect of the life insurance policy in respect of which the exemption test policy was issued except that

(A) where the life insurance policy is one to which paragraph 1403(1)(e) applies and the amount determined under subparagraph 1401(1)(c)(i) in respect of that policy is greater than the amount determined under subparagraph 1401(1)(c)(ii) in respect thereof, the rates of interest and mortality used may be those used in computing the cash surrender values of that policy, and

(B) where an interest rate for a period otherwise determined under this subparagraph in respect of that interest is less than an interest rate so determined for a subsequent period, the single rate that could, if it applied for each period, have been used in determining the premiums for the life insurance policy shall be used, and

(ii) notwithstanding subparagraph (i),

(A) where the rates referred to in subparagraph (i) do not exist, the minimum guaranteed rates of interest used under the life insurance policy to determine cash surrender values and the rates of mortality under the Commissioners 1958 Standard Ordinary Mortality Table, as published in Volume X of the Transactions of the Society of Actuaries, relevant to the person whose life is insured under the life insurance policy shall be used, or

(B) where, in respect of the life insurance policy in respect of which the exemption test policy was issued, the period over which the amount determined under clause 1401(1)(c)(ii)(A) does not extend to the date determined under subparagraph 306(3)(d)(ii), the weighted arithmetic mean of the interest rates used to determine such amount shall be used for the period that is after that period and before that date.

(3) Notwithstanding paragraph (2)(c),

(a) in the case of a life insurance policy issued after April 30, 1985, no rate of interest used for the purpose of determining the accumulating fund in respect of an exemption test policy issued in respect thereof shall be less than 4 per cent per annum; and

(b) in the case of a life insurance policy issued before May 1, 1985, no rate of interest used for the purpose of determining the accumulating fund in respect of an exemption test policy issued in respect thereof shall be less than 3 per cent per annum.

(4) For the purposes of paragraph (1)(c),

(a) where on the date of issue of an exemption test policy the person whose life is insured has attained the age of 75 years, the references in paragraph (1)(c) to "20" and "twentieth" shall be read as references to "10" and "tenth" respectively; and

(b) where on the date of issue of an exemption test policy the person whose life is insured has attained the age of 66 years but not the age of 75 years, the references in paragraph (1)(c) to "20" and "twentieth" shall be read as references to

(i) the number obtained when the number of years by which the age of the person whose life is insured exceeds 65 years is subtracted from 20, and

(ii) the adjectival form of the number obtained by performing the computation described in subparagraph (i), respectively.

(5) In this section, any amount determined by reference to section 1401 shall be determined

(a) without regard to section 1402;

(b) as if each reference therein to the term "policy loan" were read as if that term had the meaning assigned by paragraph 148(9)(e) [148(9)"policy loan"] of the Act; and

(c) as if clauses 1401(1)(c)(i)(B) and 1401(1)(c)(ii)(C) were read without reference to the expression "or the interest thereon that has accrued to the insurer at the end of the year".

308. Net cost of pure insurance and mortality gains and losses — (1) For the purposes of subparagraph 20(1)(e.2)(ii) and paragraph (a) of the description of L in the definition "adjusted cost basis" in subsection 148(9) of the Act, the net cost of pure insurance for a year in respect of a taxpayer's interest in a life insurance policy is the product obtained when the probability, computed on the basis of the rates of mortality under the 1969-75 mortality tables of the Canadian Institute of Actuaries published in Volume XVI of the Proceedings of the Canadian Institute of Actuaries or on the basis described in subsection (1.1), that a person who has the same relevant characteristics as the person whose life is insured will die in the year is multiplied by the amount by which

(a) the benefit on death in respect of the taxpayer's interest at the end of the year

(b) the accumulating fund (determined without regard to any policy loan outstanding) in respect of the taxpayer's interest in the policy at the end of the year or the cash surrender value of such interest at the end of the year, depending on the method regularly followed by the life insurer in computing net cost of pure insurance.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-87R2: Policyholders' income from life insurance policies; IT-309R2: Premiums on life insurance used as collateral.

(1.1) Where premiums for a particular class of life insurance policy offered by a life insurer do not depend directly on smoking or sex classification, the probability referred to in subsection (1) may be determined using rates of mortality otherwise determined provided that for each age for such class of life insurance policy, the expected value of the aggregate net cost of pure insurance, calculated using such rates of mortality, is equal to the expected value of the aggregate net cost of pure insurance, calculated using the rates of mortality under the 1969-75 mortality tables of the Canadian Institute of Actuaries published in Volume XVI of the Proceedings of the Canadian Institute of Actuaries.

(2) Subject to subsection (4), for the purposes of this section and subparagraph 148(9)(a)(v.1) [148(9)"adjusted cost basis"G] of the Act, a "mortality gain" immediately before the end of any calendar year after 1982 in respect of a taxpayer's interest in a life annuity contract means such reasonable amount in respect of his interest therein at that time that the life insurer determines to be the increase to the accumulating fund in respect of the interest that occurred during that year as a consequence of the survival to the end of the year of one or more of the annuitants thereunder.

(3) Subject to subsection (4), for the purposes of this section and subparagraph 148(9)(a)(xi) [148(9)"adjusted cost basis"(c)] of the Act, a "mortality loss" immediately before a particular time after 1982 in respect of an interest in a life annuity contract disposed of immediately after that particular time as a consequence of the death of an annuitant thereunder means such reasonable amount that the life insurer determines to be the decrease, as a consequence of the death, in the accumulating fund in respect of the interest assuming that, in determining such decrease, the accumulating fund immediately after the death is determined in the manner described in subparagraph 307(1)(b)(i).

(4) In determining an amount for a year in respect of an interest in a life annuity contract under subsection (2) or (3), the expected value of the mortality gains in respect of the interest for the year shall be equal to the expected value of the mortality losses in respect of the interest for the year and the mortality rates for the year used in computing those expected values shall be those that would be relevant to the interest and that are specified under such of paragraphs 1403(1)(c), (d) and (e) as are applicable.

(a) replaced by P.C. 1994-940, s. 3, June 2, 1994, Canada Gazette, Part II, June 15, 1994, applicable to years ending after 1989, except that for taxation years that ended before December 1991, the reference in subsec. 308(1) to "subparagraph 20(1)(e.2)(ii) and paragraph (a) of the description of L in the definition "adjusted cost basis" in subsection 148(9)" shall be read as "subparagraphs 20(1)(e.2)(ii) and 148(9)(a)(ix)".

S. 308 added by P.C. 1983-3530, s. 5, November 17, 1983, Canada Gazette, Part II, November 24, 1983, applicable to taxation years commencing May 31, 1985. S.C. 1984, c. 1, subsec. 82(4) provides that s. 308 is deemed to have been validly made on November 17, 1983, with effect as indicated above as if para. 148(9)(a) of the Income Tax Act as amended by 1984, c. 1, had been in force on that date.

309. Prescribed premiums and prescribed increases — (1) For the purposes of subsections 12.2(9) and 89(2) of the Act, section 306 and this section, a premium at any time under a life insurance policy is a "prescribed premium" if the total amount of one or more premiums paid at that time under the policy exceeds the amount of premium that, under the policy, was scheduled to be paid at that time and that was fixed and determined on or before December 1, 1982, adjusted for such of the following transactions and events that have occurred after that date in respect of the policy:

(a) a change in underwriting class;

(b) a change in premium due to a change in frequency of premium payments within a year that does not alter the present value, at the beginning of the year, of the total premiums to be paid under the policy in the year;

(c) an addition or deletion of accidental death or guaranteed purchase option benefits or disability benefits that provide for annuity payments or waiver of premiums;

(d) a premium adjustment as a result of interest, mortality or expense considerations, or of a change in the benefit on death under the policy relating to an increase in the Consumer Price Index (as published by Statistics Canada under the authority of the Statistics Act) where such adjustment

(i) is made by the life insurer on a class basis pursuant to the policy's terms as they read on December 1, 1982, and

(ii) is not made as a result of the exercise of a conversion privilege under the policy;

(e) a change arising from the provision of an additional benefit on death under a participating life insurance policy (within the meaning assigned by paragraph 138(12)(k) [138(12)"participating life insurance policy"] of the Act) as, on account or in lieu of payment of, or in satisfaction of

(i) policy dividends or other distributions of the life insurer's income from its participating life insurance business as determined under section 2402, or

(ii) interest earned on policy dividends that are held on deposit by the life insurer;

(f) redating lapsed policies within the reinstatement period referred to in subparagraph 148(9)(c)(vi) [148(9)"disposition"(g)] of the Act or redating for policy loan indebtedness;

(g) a change in premium due to a correction of erroneous information contained in the application for the policy;

(h) payment of a premium after its due date, or payment of a premium no more than 30 days before its due date, as established on or before December 1, 1982; and

(i) the payment of an amount described in subparagraph 148(9)(e.1)(i) [148(9)"premium"(a)] of the Act.

(2) For the purposes of subsections 12.2(9) and 89(2) of the Act, a "prescribed increase" in a benefit on death under a life insurance policy has occurred at any time where the amount of the benefit on death under the policy at that time exceeds the amount of the benefit on death at that time under the policy that was fixed and determined on or before December 1, 1982, adjusted for such of the following transactions and events that have occurred after that date in respect of the policy:

(a) an increase resulting from a change described in paragraph (1)(e);

(b) a change as a result of interest, mortality or expense considerations, or an increase in the Consumer Price Index (as published by Statistics Canada under the authority of the Statistics Act) where such change is made by the life insurer on a class basis pursuant to the policy's terms as they read on December 1, 1982;

(c) an increase in consequence of the prepayment of premiums (other than prescribed premiums) under the policy where such increase does not exceed the aggregate of the premiums that would otherwise have been paid;

(d) an increase in respect of a policy for which

(i) the benefit on death was, at December 1, 1982, a specific mathematical function of the policy's cash surrender value or factors including the policy's cash surrender value, and

(ii) that function has not changed since that date, unless any part of such increase is attributable to a prescribed premium paid in respect of a policy or to income earned on such a premium; and

(e) an increase that is granted by the life insurer on a class basis without consideration and not pursuant to any term of the contract.

(3) For the purposes of subsections (1) and (2), a life insurance policy that is issued as a result of the exercise of a renewal privilege provided under the terms of another policy as they read on December 1, 1982 shall be deemed to be a continuation of that other policy.

(4) For the purposes of subsection (2), a life insurance policy that is issued as a result of the exercise of a conversion privilege provided under the terms of another policy as they read on December 1, 1982 shall be deemed to be a continuation of that other policy except that any portion of the policy relating to the portion of the benefit on death, immediately before the conversion, that arose as a consequence of an event occurring after December 1, 1982 and described in paragraph (1)(e) shall be deemed to be a separate life insurance policy issued at the time of the conversion.
